Hello. Just got a Carver ct 17 from father in law. It's not working. Once in awhile it will work. Radio display comes on, as well as remote lights and surround sound lights and volume knob light. Someone said something about it clicking when u turn it on and it does one time. When it does work the input select lights are one.

I have a Carver CT-6 Tuner and preamplifier. The Power Transformer PT951 Carver part N° NPT-29045 is burnt out. I asked Carver Audio repair but they answered that they do not sell spare parts. To send the CT-6 to the USA from Argentina, to install a new transformer is a difficult, long time and risky thing.

Carver designs in general are not easy to repair. I would recommend that you send this unit into a Carver authorized service center. The likely problem is the output transistors, but the driver circuits and predrivers are not simple designs and if there is a problem there, it could effect the outputs.

Let me stress that overall the unit ,which was purchased in 1989 , was the best Carver had to offer. The CT-17 didn't come out til later that year and I wished I would have waited. I do honestly think that the CT-17 Carver Dolby Pre-Amp was the best that Carver made. The Ct-7 has all of the functions you come to expect from Carver.

docadillac wrote:I've never owned either one, but I believe the basic idea at it's core is that preamps should be as close to a pure line in and out as possible. That is, they should not add any coloration to the sound. I believe the ct 17 has a second zone capability. Sonic holography is a very worthwhile benefit.
